DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

1. Applicant's election of group I, claims 1-19 with traverse in Paper No. 3 is acknowledged. Because applicant did not distinctly and specifically point out the supposed errors in the restriction requirement, the election has been treated as an election without traverse (MPEP § 818.03(a)).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. Claims 1-4, 8,9,12, 13, and 17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by admitted prior art.

The admitted prior art teaches that a layer comprising a refractory metal is formed (page 3 of the specification, line 10). A greatest thickness (so-called a thickness in the instant claims) of the layer of refractory metal is determined (page 4 of the specification, lines 8-9). In addition, in semiconductor device fabrication, because it is a sub-micron high precision process, the thickness of each layer of material deposited is inherently determined. A portion of the layer of refractory metal is converted to a metal silicide by performing one or more anneal processes (page 3 of the specification, lines 10-14). A duration of an etching process is determined to remove unreacted portions of the refractory metal layer based on the determined thickness of the refractory metal layer (page 4 of the specification, lines 8-10). The etching process may be performed for the determined duration to remove the unreacted portions of the refractory metal layer (the specification, lines 22-23 of page 3, lines 9-10 of page 4). The limitations of claims 1, 8, 9, 12, and 17 have been addressed above.

As to dependent claims 2-4 and 13, see the specification, lines 1-10 of page 3.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 5-7, 10, 11, 14, 15, 16, 18, and 19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over admitted prior art.

The discussion of admitted prior art from above is repeated here. Claims 5-7 differ from the admitted prior art by specifying determine a thickness of the layer of metal based on single measurement or multiple measurements or an average thickness, however, it is simply a simple engineering practice and data collection to measure a thickness of a layer and repeat the measurement as many times as needed for smooth the measurement deviations (e.g., the average and the standard deviation), and indeed, as stated above, in semiconductor device fabrication, because it is a sub-micron high precision process, the thickness of each layer of material deposited is inherently determined.

As to dependent claims 10,11, 18, and 19, according to the basic engineering principle of annealing /diffusion, the annealing /diffusion process is a function of temperature and thickness of the material, therefore, the unreacted portion of the material is also a function of temperature and thickness, and a duration to remove unreacted portions of material is accordingly as a function of the temperature and the thickness of the material (so-called correlates the duration of the etching process to the determined thickness of the refractory metal layer in the instant claims). It would be obvious to one skilled in the art to perform data acquisition such as tabulate / extrapolate/ manipulate data and using statistics tools (regression, extrapolation, best-fit) to perform the calculation.
